GOLF TIP

“”How to play a high flying, soft landing pitch shot from the rough”.

I mostly play these shots like a soft blast from sand, opening the clubface at address, picking the clubhead up sharply in the backswing, then dropping or sliding the clubhead under the ball. The key factor on this shot is never to let the right hand roll over through impact.

THE PRO'S VIEW:

We continue to advise you on how to best manage your play at Monterey Pines Golf Course. You will only see the tougher Par 3 holes in this column as this month we work on:

HOLE #13: 192 YARDS, PAR 3
This hole is tough! It's long and features two huge Monterey cypress trees that guard the left side of the green. The right side is trapped, leaving the golfer with only a small opening to hit to the green. Another problem can also occur. Most golfers either slice or face a golf ball, which is affected then by the prevailing afternoon breeze off the ocean.

There are two shots to play:

“The first shot option (geared to the more accomplished golfer) is to hit a high hard drive at the right side of the bunker (sand trap) bringing it right-to-left to the green”.

“With the second shot option, the average golfer, using a club that will keep the ball low, can hit the ball and let it roll to the green. If it does not hit the green, at least there is the opportunity to chip it close and save par.”
